Bala Hatun in Kuruluş Osman for so long, how did you approach portraying her growth and evolution throughout the series?

I think creating a character is something like putting on an outfit with all of its features.

For an important historical person, you're shaping yourself according to them, not to your body. I witnessed many memories and struggles of Bala Hatun. When the journey is long with a character, assimilation becomes greater. The historical information was very helpful to me but reaching the point of being in love, having children, and struggling as a woman from a young girl required a great deal of mental and physical effort on my part.
